

Question 1 Sample W

The world has completely changed in the last 20 years, some important things have seemed to be sacrificed to meet the needs of the changing world we live in. The US postal service has suffered considerably from the competition of the Internet. "The soft economy is crimping the overall volume of mail, which fell 5.5 percent in the last year." (McDevitt source e) the USPS will continue to lose money if they do not cut back on delivery days and other services. People will continue to use the Internet for e-mails and other things that hurt the mail industry. In 2000, it has been recorded that 208 billion pieces of mail were distributed. As of 2009 it has dropped shockingly to 177 billion. The USPS will continue to face the consequences of a changing world. Fuel costs have become significantly high in the 20th century and will become higher, which will keep the mail service suffering. With that, introduces reality "if there are no "real" letters, real ink on real paper what would be left?" (Cullen 9F) The USPS Should limit the delivery days to save money, if mail shipments are dropping so significantly, then there is no reason why this should continue.

Some people don't use the post office because its too slow. This will make the USPS harder to save in the long run.