Abraham Lincoln did many different things in his time. In this passage, it mostly tells of what Lincoln thought about slavery and the Civil War. This is just Lincoln's opinion because everyone has their own opinions about slavery and the Civil War. Lincoln is giving a speech to his people so that the people will know what he thinks about slavery and the war. Lincoln just wants to express his feelings on these issues.

Lincoln begins his speech talking about the issue of the Civil War. Most people did not want a war and tried everything that they could not to start one. What was this war for? People wanted to save their Union without a war but with negotiation. Both of the parties did not go straight in to war but eventually they would because there would not just be no war and letting the nation survive/ Lincoln's tone and attitude about the Civil War seems to be that he really does not want to have war but since there is going to be one he will have people fight in it to save the Union and nation. Why was war fixing to start up? In Lincoln's time, one-eighth of population was colored people. Therefore slavery was a major issue back then. People who were slaves knew they had something to do with the war. Slaves were not distributed all over the Union though, they were only distributed in the South. This is probably why war was started. People everywhere else did not see why slaves were just allowed in the south. Both parties who wanted to have war were only thinking of themselves though. They did not think that slaves were like them at all. Slaves read the Bible and prayed to the same God just like they do. This was overlooked because they just wanted slaves to be distributed everywhere, not just in the south. Slaves did not have equal rights like white people did. They really did not have say in what happened to them. Not only were slaves just distributed in the south but they probably were free too, but still slaves. The North did not like this at all, so this led to another reason for war. All Lincoln is trying to explain to people is that slaves are the same type of people as the North. The only thing different is that they are colored. Lincoln wants slaves to be treated as normal people. He really does not see the point in getting a war started over slaves being distributed everywhere and not having rights, Lincoln thinks that there should be a war over slave being free and treated like white men.

Lincoln disagrees with all the reasons for wanting to have a civil war. So what is the point he is trying to get across about slavery and civil war? Lincoln wants people to put themselves in slaves shoes, see how it feels to be them and the reason for war. Slaves should be treated equal and these two parties should have never went to war over slaves.
